Road trip to West Virginia's Canaan Valley
Thursday – Sunday, October 2-5, 2014
Fee: $195 CVPS member/$255 non-member

Early-bird Discount for first 10 participants registered by June 30, 2014:
$175 CVPS member/ $235 non-member

Members of the Photo Society Steering Committee will lead a road trip to the Canaan Valley of West Virginia, known for its vivid fall color, waterfalls, sheer rock cliffs, bogs and scenic views from the highest mountain in the mountain state. The Canaan Valley is less than six hours from northeast Ohio and is worth visiting more than once.

Among the highlights:

- Blackwater Falls: These falls drop five stories and are among the most-photographed in the state. The falls may be viewed from above and below. The water gets its dark color from tannic acid from fallen hemlock and red spruce needles.
- Pendleton Point: This area of Blackwater Falls State Park wide view of the Blackwater Canyon. It is the canyon's and widest point. The waters of Falls cascade down the mountain opposite the overlook.
- Dolly Sods: Here is a wilderness more like Canada than West Virginia. There are sphagnum bogs with reindeer moss. The branches of spruce trees grow only on one side because of strong prevailing winds.
- Seneca Rocks: These rocks, which rise nearly 900 feet above the North Fork River, are one of the best-known landmarks of West Virginia.
- Spruce Knob: At 4,863 feet above sea level, Spruce Knob is West Virginia's highest mountain. This rugged alpine peak is an ideal place to view a sunset.

David LaBelle

Timing, Light and Composition
Thursday, March 20, 2014 – 7:00 p.m., Happy Days Lodge

Whether a beginner or a salty veteran, David LaBelle will entertain you while illustrating and reinforcing the fundamentals of great photography: Timing, light and composition. He also may challenge a few "old wives tales" about what makes good a picture.

David is a photographer, editor, teacher and author. He has worked for 20 newspapers and magazines, including the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, where he was assistant managing editor for photography. He currently directs the photojournalism program at Kent State University and has taught at Western Kentucky University and the University of Kentucky. In 1991, the National Press Photographers Association honored LaBelle with the Robin F. Garland Award for photojournalism education. LaBelle has written four books, including "The Great Picture Hunt."

Doug Johnson

Landscape Photography: Solutions for High-Contrast Scenes

Thursday, April 24, 2014 – 7:00 p.m., Happy Days Lodge

Since the early attempts at capturing landscape images, photographers have recognized the limitations of their camera systems to capture what the eye sees in high-contrast scenes. Early pioneers like Gustave Le Gray in the 1800s printed from two negatives and in the 1990s, Galen Rowell developed the split neutral density filter to resolve the camera's limitations. In today's digital age similar challenges still exist, but we now have even more options. Camera technology and such post-processing tools as High Dynamic Range software offer more power to capture highlight and shadow detail in high-contrast situations.

Professional landscape photographer Doug Johnson will show how to recognize high-contrast scenes where the camera cannot record the dynamic range and will present six realistic solutions, including split neutral density decisions and a simple workflow in HDR software to conquer this age-old issue.

[Doug Johnson also is leading a workshop on landscape photography. For more, see the workshop portion of this document.]
